The story of the logo:

Europa is a princess from the city of Tyre in ancient Phoenicia who, according to Greek mythology, was abducted by Zeus and taken to Crete. Her story is one of the most well known love stories in Greek mythology.

The story of Europa begins with her father, Agenor, the king of Tyre. Agenor had two sons, Cadmus and Phoenix, and three daughters, Europa being the youngest. Europa was renowned for her beauty, and it was said that she was the most beautiful woman in the world.

One day Zeus, the king of the gods, was walking along the beach when he noticed Europa. He was instantly taken with her beauty, and so he decided to take on the form of a white bull and approach her. Europa was enchanted by the bull and decided to take it as a pet. She climbed on its back and the bull ran off with her to Crete. Once they arrived in Crete, Zeus revealed his true form and told her that he was the god who had taken her. He promptly took her as his wife and they had three sons together: Minos, Rhadamanthys and Sarpedon.

Europa's story is often used as a symbol of fidelity and devotion. She was willing to give up all that was familiar to her in order to be with the man she loved, even though he was a god. The story of Europa's abduction is still popular today and is the basis for many works of literature, art and film.

Cadmus took the Phoenician alphabets to the Greek and from there the world started writing with letters instead of symbols.

In ancient Phoenicia, the daring Tyre discovered a new recipe that would become a staple in the Mediterranean region and beyond. It was the Tarator, a refreshingly cool and tangy sauce made with tahini, garlic, lemon juice, and olive oil. It was so beloved that it was an essential accompaniment to fish and other dishes throughout the region.

The recipe is believed to have originated in Tyre and was passed down through generations of Phoenician cooks. The tartness of the lemon juice was an ideal balance to the richness of the tahini and garlic, creating a unique flavor. The sauce was also very versatile, able to be used as a dip, a dressing for salads, or even a marinade for meats.

Today, Tyre's Tarator is still enjoyed around the world, with variations depending on the country or region. From the Middle East to Eastern Europe, the tasty sauce is a staple in kitchens and restaurants alike. So the next time you're in the mood for something different, head to the Mediterranean and give Tyre's Tarator a try!
